"I think his friends are bad influences."

If you're sure you're not just jealous, then calmly explain to him how you feel. "Offer up a few examples of how you think they negatively influence him," suggests Carl Alasko, PhD, author of Emotional Bullshit.

"Explain that you care about him and don't want him to be hurt by them."

Hearing your concerns might open his eyes. But if he makes it clear his buddies aren't as bad as you say, drop it. You don't have to like them, but you can't make him cut them loose.

Romance Booster

Stay Close When You're Apart

There's more than one way to steam up the mirror.

Keep your relationship hot even though the demands of family, work, and social events mean less QT with your man.

LEAVE LITTLE NOTES. If your guy is heading out of town, pack a few notes in his suitcase that say things like how you can't wait for his return, says psychiatrist Paul Dobransky, author of The Secret Psychology of How We Fall in Love. If you're the one traveling, hide them around his house before you go. "Each note reinforces your connection, and finding them will be a sweet surprise for him," says Dr. Dobransky.

MAKE A PERSONAL PLAYLIST. Create identical playlists on each of your iPods. Include tunes he loves and ones that resonate with you two as a couple. Listening to them when you're apart will help maintain your emotional bond.

GET HIM A GOOFY PRESENT. After visiting family, give him something sentimental, like a childhood photo. It's more meaningful than a generic airport gift. "And if it's specific to him, it'll make him feel closer to you," explains Jackie Black, PhD, author of Meeting Your Match. If he's away, send him a "Baby, I miss you" care package with cookies and a card.

Blow-His-Mind Tip

Give him a reason to spy on you.

Sex Up Your Primping

As you're getting ready to go out, put on your makeup while still half undressed. Leave the door open a bit so your guy can see you. When you know he's watching, lean in to the mirror, giving him a peek at your hottest assets. He'll never guess that this secret glimpse was a plot you devised to rile him up.
